

SCHLEY COURT IS IN SESSION

Rear Admiral Higginson Was the First Witness Called This Morning.

ONE WAS FORMAL

Marines on Guard Barred Out All Save the Court and Witnesses.

OBJECTIONS TO CHART

Washington, Sept. 20.—The hearing of the testimony by the Schley court of inquiry began this morning. Rear Admiral Higginson being the first witness called. When the court convened it was apparent that a new tone of formality had crept into the proceedings. Marines were on guard at the railing and before the court opened barred out all save the court and the witnesses. Later representatives of the press associations were allowed within the railings.

When Schley entered there was a subdued handclapping by the audience. The marines, however, quickly suppressed it. As soon as the court had taken their seats Judge Advocate Lemley read the order appointing Admiral Ramsay a member of the court and asked Schley if he had any objection to him. Schley said he had not. After a few routine matters had been disposed of Judge Lemley called Higginson.

Before Higginson was called Lemley introduced as evidence a copy of the senate document relating to the Sampson-Schley controversy, together with hydrographic office charts showing the scenes of the Santiago campaign, were then spread before the court, the chart showing the position of the vessels off Santiago.

Schley's counsel objected to its introduction as evidence on account of its gross incorrectness. Lemley then said it was introduced for reference and does not prove anything.

Higginson then took the stand. He commanded the Battleship Massachusetts during the Santiago campaign. Asked what was done by Schley to discover the Spanish fleet, he said: "Nothing to my knowledge." He said that he had received information from Captain McCalla of the Marlborough. He said McCalla obtained the news on shore and communicated it to Schley on May 24th, as near as he could remember. Nothing had been done to destroy the shore batteries and that the fleet had no engagement.

MEMORIAL DAY AT THE ELKHORN FAIR

Largest Attendance Ever Known at the Famous Walworth County Agricultural Show.

Elkhorn, Sept. 20.—Though yesterday was rainy it was in many respects the biggest day the Walworth county fair has ever known. Treasurer J. E. Brem says that the gate receipts are the largest for any one day that he has ever known. It is estimated that 25,000 people were on the grounds. They came early, thinking the day might prove pleasant, and when it began to rain they stayed right along, filling the amphitheater, oral hall and other buildings, exhibit tents and side stands almost to suffocation. Those that had to stay out tramped cheerfully around in the drizzle.

The memorial services for President McKinley held at 10:30 o'clock were attended by 10,000 people. The principal address was by Judge Winslow of the state supreme court, who paid an eloquent tribute to the personal life and character of the martyred president. The Rev. R. K.

PLAYING THE GAME OF INSANITY; EXTRA GUARD PUT OVER CZOLGOSZ

He Mutters Incoherently and Will Not Answer Any Questions—No Red Tape in This Trial.

Buffalo, New York, September 20.—Locked in a remote room at the city hall, District Attorney Penney and Supt. Bull have been in conference all day relative to the trial of Czolgosz which begins on Monday morning. It is believed that he father and brother of the assassin are with the district attorney and police superintendent. To a correspondent Supt. Bull said:

"I can neither deny nor affirm the report that the father of Czolgosz is in Buffalo. We have reasons for keeping all of these matters to ourselves."

Czolgosz, the assassin, is playing the game of insanity with a vengeance. He mutters incoherently, as a result of which an extra guard has been assigned to his cell. Thousands of people were in front of the jail all day craning their necks to get a view of Czolgosz if he appears at the window which he has not done. He sits with his head resting between his hands in a cell on the ground floor. "No red tape will be stretched Manaton of the Summerfield Methodist church, Milwaukee, spoke on the public life and services of the late chief. The speakers were introduced by H. C. Staver, a schoolmate and a personal friend of McKinley.

FOR A TRANSALASKAN ROAD

Promoters Plan Connection With the New Siberian Line

Denver, Sept. 20.—The organization of a gigantic railroad scheme, The Trans-Alaskan Railway, has been perfected here during the last six weeks. The company is incorporated under the laws of the state of Washington, and is capitalized for $50,000,000. It is proposed to build and operate a line of railroad connecting with the Trans-Siberian railroad at some point opposite Cape Prince of Wales on the American side by a line of steel ferryboats across Bering strait.

ROOSEVELT WILL STAY AT CAPITAL

President Will Not Go to Oyster Bay Next Week, as He Had Planned To Do.

Canton, O., September 20.—President Roosevelt has given up that part of his programme for the immediate future which he announced in Washington providing for a visit to Oyster Bay early next week. He went to the home of his brother-in-law, Commander Cowles, on arrival at Washington this morning, and will remain there until the executive mansion is ready for the reception of himself and family, when he and Mrs. Roosevelt with their children will take possession of it.

In addition to the official announcement today that Mrs. McKinley's physician, Dr. Rixey will be appointed surgeon general of the navy, it has been decided that W. B. Ridgely of Illinois son-in-law of Senator Cullom, will succeed Charles G. Dawes of Illinois as comptroller of the currency, October 1.

The commission was signed by President McKinley before he went to Buffalo on his fatal journey. Mr. Dawes will at the expiration of his term actively begin his campaign for the senatorship to succeed William E. Mason.

THROWS AWAY HIS MONEY.

Bank Cashier at Indianapolis Goes Mad, Indiscreetly.

Indianapolis, Ind., Sept. 20.—Thomas O. Dargy, cashier of the Bedford National bank, was taken to police headquarters, insane. He had thrown away almost $400 before his friends discovered his condition. He came here this morning with $500 to attend the state fair. He went to the fair grounds early and immediately began to dispose of his money recklessly. He paid a huckster $5 for a sack of peanuts and bought newspapers at $1 apiece. Then dollar bills were handed out with a free hand at various stands and change was invariably refused. He wanted to buy the building in which the fine arts exhibit is. At the Hotel English he disposed of another hundred dollars and informed those who would listen that a Chicago operator employed by the Bell Telephone company had insulted him over the long-distance wire and that he had purchased the company's property in order to discharge the operator. He said he had bought several street car companies in Chicago. His friends then took him in charge.

Mrs. McKinley Is Better.

Canton, Sept. 20.—Dr. Rixey said this morning that Mrs. McKinley was physically better than she had been in ten years. The treatment in her case will be to keep her mind off her loss. She will be convinced that she must look after her estate and thus keep her mind occupied.

P. J. Rice of Chicago, was in the city yesterday. It is not known whether he or J. W. Bates of Beloit, was the cause of the fire alarm being turned in.

BAR THE DOORS TO ANARCHISTS

Not Well With Our Laws When they Protect Such People.

NO ROOM FOR THEM

Demand on Congress by Gen.

John C. Black To Make Laws To Cover Case

RESTRICT THE PRESS

Chicago, Sept. 20.—General John C. Black brought forth the cheers from the great audience which filled the Auditorium when, at the meeting in memory of President McKinley, he declared the United States had no room for men of the type of him who committed the recent crime at Buffalo. The general had spoken sorrowfully of the death of McKinley, but called attention to the fact that for him personally it was rest from toil. He had said the death, regretted and regrettable as it was, in no way impaired the strength of the government. Then straightening up, he exclaimed: "But it is not well with our laws that we harbor the men who hate our laws and have vowed the destruction of our institutions. America will welcome, as she always has, the virtuous exile and honest immigrant, but she must and will bar her doors to anarchists. We demand of our servants in congress that they make the office of president safe for its incumbent so that his election shall not be equivalent to a death warrant at the hands of a rifleman."

Up to this time the audience had been notable for its lack of demonstrativeness. Large as it was it had seemed to be imbued with the idea that it was there more as a gathering of mourners and had failed to applaud the speakers, save for some handclapping when they finished. An admirable address by ex-Congressman George E. Adams had been listened to in respectful, if interested silence. But when General Black gave utterance to the sentences quoted in the foregoing his hearers awoke. Cheers greeted the sentiments he expressed and men and women alike arose to their feet and cheered back again. The orator had touched a political nerve and his audience responded.

Mr. Adams spoke along somewhat the same lines as General Black, who followed him. He said those who incited assassination were as guilty as the assassin himself, and spoke of the amazement Americans felt at the fact that the president had been shot simply because he was the president. "How can we prevent the recurrence of such a crime?" asked he, "the crime as stupid as it was atrocious," and then, as one answer, said: "Those who write or speak must be held responsible for the probable effect of what they say. If they knowingly incite murder their crime is none the less because they deprecate murder in the same breath."

Hang Czolgosz in Emery.

Kenosha, Wis., Sept. 20.—Czolgosz, the assassin of President McKinley, was hanged in effigy by a mob of a thousand people in Kenosha. A short time after the memorial exercises had been held at the Rhode opera house the effigy was dragged to the spot of the proposed execution and hauled up until it caught over a telegraph wire. The police made no effort to disperse the people. On a card in large letters was printed: "Czolgosz, the Assassin. Thus let all traitors die."

Czar and Loubet Confer.

Compiegne, Sept. 20.—The Czar and President Loubet had a long confidential interview this morning. Matters of importance which it is hoped will tighten the alliance between France and Russia were discussed.

VAULT A MEMORIAL

It Was Erected in 1893 by Mrs. Francis M. Werts in Memory of Her Husband.

Canton, O., September 20.—The beautiful receiving vault in which the remains of President McKinley will repose until a vault is built, was erected in 1893 by Mrs. Francis M. Werts of this city, as a memorial to her husband. It is of Massillon sandstone and is one of the finest receiving vaults in the state. Mr. Werts in whose memory the vault was erected, was a prominent Canton citizen, who twenty years ago, was engaged in the manufacture of carriages. It is probable that congress will appropriate a sum sufficient for the erection of a suitable monument to the late president.

Roosevelt in Washington.

Washington, Sept. 20.—The train bearing Roosevelt and members of the cabinet arrived here this morning. A large force of policemen kept the crowds far away from the president, who was immediately driven to the White House.

PASSENGER TRAIN A WRECK.

Rails in Michigan Cause Spreading

Rails and Coaches Leave Curve. St. Joseph, Mich., Sept. 20.—South-bound passenger train No. 4, on the Milwaukee, Benton Harbor and Columbus railroad, leaving Benton Harbor at 4 p. m., was wrecked one mile south of Berrien Springs early in the evening. As the train was moving around a sharp curve near the sinkhole territory the baggage car and two passenger coaches left the tracks, owing to spreading rails, the roadbed having been washed out by rain. The passenger coaches swayed sidewise with terrible force and plunged against the sand banks an instant later. The coaches turned over on their sides. The coaches contained several passengers, all of whom had marvelous escapes uninjured from the upturned coaches. A wrecking crew from this city was dispatched to the scene of the wreck.

LOST CHILD FOUND DEAD IN A SWAMP

Searchers Reach Three-Year-Old Son of Andrew Kragness Too Late To Save Life.

Menomonie, Wis., Sept. 20.—The lifeless body of the 3-year-old son of Andrew Kragness of this city was found today in a swamp three miles from home, where he wandered and perished from exposure, fatigue and fright.

He went into the woods on Tuesday afternoon with two older boys and when night came he could not be found. A searching party numbering over two hundred was formed, and the adjacent country was scoured without success. Worn out with fatigue a new party of over three hundred was formed yesterday, which renewed the search with increased determination.

Wilson Creek was dragged for two miles, and every farmhouse was visited within five miles of the city. The news spread through the city, and the excitement increased so that when night came a fresh party of over 400 was ready to resume the search. They were formed in long lines, and aided with lanterns, they paralleled the woods and swamps, walking about eight feet apart and resembling an arm of soldiers.

This morning the lifeless body of the little fellow was found. His tear-stained face and bruised body showed signs of great suffering from fright and pain. The terrible revelation has almost paralyzed the grief-stricken parents.

FIRST OFFICIAL ACT

President Roosevelt Signs the Commission of Brigadier General James Bell This Morning

Washington, September 20.—The first official act of the new president was to sign the commission of Brig. Gen. James Bell. In elevating Col. Bell to a brigadier generalship, Roosevelt gives his first proof to carry out the wishes of his predecessor. The cabinet this morning discussed the electoral law formulated by the Cuban constitutional convention, of which it is said the president's advisers expressed their approval.

ALLIED PARTY IS ORGANIZED.

New Political Body Holds First Conference in Kansas City.

Kansas City, Mo., Sept. 20.—The delegates representing seven political parties of reform, who came here to the allied third party conference, held their first joint session after two days of separate conference meetings behind closed doors. All of the preliminary work of launching the new political party which is to be a union of all reform parties was done by the conference committees of the several delegations before the delegates met in joint session tonight. It was decided that the new party is to be called "the allied party," and a platform embodying the following principles was agreed upon by the conference committees: The platform demands the initiative and referendum and public ownership of public utilities; declares against land speculation and alien ownership; favors "scientific money based on the entire wealth of the people of the nation and not redeemable in any specific commodity, but to be full legal tender for all debts, to be issued by the government only, without the intervention of banks, in sufficient quantity to meet the requirements of commerce." The purpose of the joint session was to decide upon the time and place to hold the convention which will meet to ratify the actions of this conference and perfect the permanent organization of the new party. The conference was called to order by J. H. Cook of Carthage, Mo. Dr. J. E. Chambers was elected temporary chairman. The temporary organization was made permanent and a committee of five, consisting of one fusion populist, two middle-of-the-road populists and two members of the public ownership party, was appointed to prepare an address to the public outlining the principles and purposes of this reform movement.

Do Not Be Selfish.

Don't be selfish anywhere. Don't be selfish most of all, in your religion. Let yourselves be free in your religion, and be utterly unselfish. Claim your freedom in service.—Phillips Brooks.

HOMAGE OF JANESVILLE TO ILLUSTRIOUS DEAD

City Pays Its Last Tribute to the Late President McKinley in a Monster Parade and Public Exercises at the Opera House.

MOMENT OF SILENCE IN DRAMATIC DAY

Thousands of Spectators in Silent Sympathy Make Aisles for the Marchers Along the Streets—Spell of Sorrow Held the City All the Day Long.

All America stood in silence with bowed heads and bleeding hearts before the tomb of William McKinley, her third martyred president, yesterday. The tears which fell from weeping eyes mingled with those which nature shed. The draperies of mourning on business buildings and private residences hung lifeless, gloom, sorrow and depression in every fold. Only the flags at half-mast above the city fluttered lightly in the faint breeze.

The day was one which will never be forgotten. At noon the key was turned in the door of every store and office, factory, workshop and business place. Stores whose doors had never been during the day time, such as cigar stores and restaurants, were deserted and the entire city was evidence of the spirit of mourning which awaited spectators who gathered on the streets brought to many a keener realization of the national loss, a more poignant grief over the country's bereavement.

Dark and Gloomy Day.

A light, cold rain began falling at noon and increased as the afternoon grew older. It was a peculiar coincidence that both on the day when President McKinley passed away and on the day when he was laid at rest the heavens wept, and the day was dark and gloomy. Yesterday afternoon was a most disagreeable one; yet in spite of this fact, hundreds of men of Janesville marched through the streets of the city, between lines of deserted buildings in front of which stood crowds of sad-faced men and women and children. Even though the streets were crowded they were almost as silent as death. No one had heart for conversation, scarcely a word was spoken and those who conversed with each other did so with hushed voices. The scene enacted in different degrees in almost every city of this country, was the grandest tribute of the many which a loving people laid on William McKinley's bier.

Record-Breaking Parade.

No occasion of happiness or of sorrow has ever been honored by such with slow tread from the court house park through the lines of spectators which assembled yesterday along the line of march, west on Pleasant St. to High street, north on High street to Milwaukee street and last on Milwaukee street to the Myers Grand opera house. Though those who marched in the parade marched under the banner of some organization the parade was one representative of the citizenship and the activities of the city. All the prominent organizations of the city were largely represented and about seven hundred men made up the longest parade of marchers that has ever been seen in the city.

First came Hon. O. F. Nowlan, marshal of the day and his assistant W. H. Appleby, both mounted. The marshals were followed by the Janesville Fire Police, who always heads a procession impressively. W. H. Sargent Post No. 20 G. A. R., eighty men strong, was headed by their life and drum corps to whose martial music their halting steps kept time. The bowed forms of the gray headed veterans who had stood shoulder to shoulder with William McKinley forty years ago were followed by the erect and neatly uniformed figures of the soldiers of Company I, Wisconsin.

sin National Guard. These military organizations served as escort for the speakers of the day and city officials who came next in carriages.

Following the carriages came the Knights Templar with thirty members all in rich and beautiful uniforms. The Imperial band marched between the Masonic order and the Canton Janesville, the uniformed rank of the Odd Fellows. Their plumed hats and uniform made them an impressive part of the impressive parade and they were followed by the other lodges of Odd Fellows, the fraternity being represented by about seventy-five men.

The Modern Woodmen of America was nearly one hundred men strong and nearly two hundred men marched under the banner of federated labor organizations. Large delegations of the Ancient Order of Hibernians, wearing the handsome uniform of the order of Catholic Knights of Wisconsin, Janesville Dental society and Concordia society were a conspicuous part of the parade, the Janesville fire department serving as rear guard.

The bells of the churches and on the fire stations tolled while the solemn funeral pageant with its draped banners, moved through the streets.

Exercises in the Theatre.

It was shortly after 2 o'clock when the parade was dismissed. The doors of the theatre had been kept closed and the marchers were seated before the public was admitted. This was but a just courtesy to the men who shared in paying an eloquent tribute to President McKinley's memory. The speakers, singers and members of the city clergy occupied seats on the stage beneath an immense flag on which had been placed the martyred president's picture. Among those who sat with them on the stage were the members of the Grand Army of the Republic. Most of the other organizations occupied the front part of the orchestra. As soon as the marchers were seated, the doors were flung wide open and in incredibly short time the flag draped boxes, orchestra, balcony and gallery were packed with a magnificent audience—an audience that during the entire memorial service was reverent, earnest and attentive.

Dr. Whiting Presides.

Dr. J. B. Whiting had been chosen presiding officer of the day and as usual he presided with that gracious tact, that simple dignity and that earnest heartiness which make him an ideal chairman on occasions which require the true sentiment of a sympathetic heart. It is worthy of note that Dr. Whiting was the presiding officer just twenty years ago when this city was called upon to hold a memorial service for that second martyred president, James A. Garfield.

It was nearly 2:30 o'clock when Dr. Whiting rose and after calling the immense audience to order, said: "Standing in the darkness and the gloom of this great calamity which has befallen the nation, it is befitting that we stand with bowed heads and speak our grief in the eloquence of silence. A beautiful ceremony has been recommended to be observed at this moment throughout the nation where people are gathered together in memory of our beloved

TWENTY-FOUR SAILORS PERISHED; STEAMER HUDSON SINKS IN A GALE

Her Whole Crew is Undoubtedly Lost—Accident Occurred Off Eagle River in Lake Superior.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., September 20.—The steamer Hudson of the Western Transit company, founded in Lake Superior off Eagle River last Monday, and her crew of twenty-four men were undoubtedly drowned.

This is in all probability the steamer was seen to go down by people on the beach on Monday forenoon. The news of the identity of the lost steamer was brought here today by the crew of the steamer John M. Nichol who sighted the Hudson in distress, but was unable to do anything for her crew because of their own peril.

The Hudson left Duluth for Buffalo on Sunday and had a cargo of 23,500 bushels of flaxseed and 69,000 bushels of wheat. The Western Transit company is the lake line of the New York Central railroad, and the Hudson was one of the best steel freight steamers on the lakes. It is believed that some accident happened to her machinery or steering gear in the furious gale which swept Lake Superior on Monday, and she fell into the trough of the sea and rolled until her cargo shifted.

The steamer then sprung a leak or had her hatches broken in by the sea sweeping her decks, and foundered within sight of land. The proximity of the steamer to the beach at Eagle River is believed to have been due to the determination of Captain A. J. MacDonald to put his steamer ashore in an effort to save the crew and the boat.

The Hudson was one of the staunchest ships on the lakes. She was built in 1888 for the Western Transit company at Detroit, and measured 2,279 tons. Her value was about $200,000, and her cargo was worth about $100,000.

PREACHERS VOICE NATION'S WOES; FUNERAL ORATIONS IN CHURCH

Final Ceremonies of Memorial Day at the Congregational Church Last Evening—The Edifice Was Packed—Warm Denunciation of Anarchy.

Neither the cold rain nor the gloom of a dark and disagreeable night had power to stay the great impulse which prompted a sorrowing people to crown a day of mourning for a departed leader with a sacred service within the house of God and so last evening the second magnificent audience of the day assembled at the Congregational church to pay honor to William McKinley, to reverence his memory and to learn the great lessons which stand revealed in the light of the fearful tragedy so recently enacted.

The church was handsomely and appropriately decorated, the choir gallery being curtained behind draperies of red, white and blue, almost concealed beneath folds of black and white. The railing of the great gallery was draped with black and white and the pulpit was one mass of solemn black. Above the organ two large flags bordered with black were looped back and from between them the kindly face of the martyred president looked out from a framework of heavy black relieved by a narrow inner border of white.

Church Was Crowded
There was scarcely an unoccupied seat in the great auditorium and many people stood in the rear of the church and sat on the gallery steps. On the pulpit platform sat Revs. R. C. Denison, A. H. Barrington, W. A. Hall, W. W. Woodside, R. M. Vaughan and J. T. Henderson while in the pews sat their congregations, Congregationalists, Episcopalians, Methodists, Baptists, Presbyterians, they forgot church creeds and met together as one great Christian family. In the front seats in the body of the church sat the members of W. H. Sargent Post, No. 20, G. A. R., which attended the services as an organization.

For the second time yesterday the old veterans, many of them in feeble health and none of them far distant from the final bugle call of taps, turned out in large numbers to honor a comrade in arms and the nation's president. Almost forty of the old soldiers attended last evening's meeting.

The service was a most beautiful and impressive one throughout and everyone present took an active part in it. The singing of "Lead, Kindly Light" by the audience, led by Archie Crawford, followed the organ voluntary which Mrs. F. F. Lewis played while the audience was assembling.

A fervent prayer was then offered by the Rev. R. C. Denison, who presided at the meeting. He also made a few introductory remarks, explaining that all through this time of sorrow it has been the thought of the churches that in the church service special stress should be laid on the religious part of President McKinley's life. The union church service had been planned most informally, it being understood that each pastor was to speak briefly on the great subject.

Address by Rev. Woodside
Rev. W. W. Woodside was the first speaker and he held that the eulogy of Franklin Pierce at the tomb of Daniel Webster is most appropriate at this time. "A great man has fallen and the heart of a nation throbs heavily at the portals of the tomb." A great man, a prince in Israel, has fallen and not only the nation but the whole civilized world mourns. America has no Westminster Abbey in which to lay her great men but she has the great American heart in which to cherish them. Among the many evidences that William McKinley was a man of God are his belief in prayer, his sweet, gentle forgiving, Christ-like spirit, which enables him to pray for the man who struck him down. A man of cultured mind standing in high position, he believed in the Bible and accepted Jesus as his Savior, but the strongest proof of his Christianity was his peaceful, triumphant death. Eminent physicians could not keep him and while men cannot understand God's way they should join their president in saying, "Thy will be done" and trust that out of the national sorrow will come some great light. Of such a death as William McKinley's death has no sting, the grave no victory.

By Rev. Mr. Vaughan
Rev. Richard M. Vaughan said that if any evidence were needed of the place which William McKinley has made in the hearts of the people, the great audience assembled at the closing service of this city's memorial was a tribute that we recognize in him, one of the sweetest and strongest characters in history. The occasion brings to mind the principle "By your fruits ye shall know them," a principle as true in the life of a nation as of individuals. The fruit of a nation is its men. In the light of this principle two glorious and tragic facts are revealed. The forces at work in the nation have brought forth two men so diametrically opposite in all things that one hesitates to name them in the same breath—William McKinley and Leon Czolgosz. The forces at work in the society and the nation stand revealed in these two men.

We honor him as a husband and a Christian and thank him for his piety and his devotion and his death. We believe that for centuries his last words will be a rich legacy. "There lies our hopefulness, because he is a product of our national forces. The schools and forces which made William McKinley will make other like him. He was the revelation of the higher forces of America."

But there is another, a darker side. Leon Czolgosz is also an American, saddened and shamed in the eyes of all nations we would deny it if we could, but wherever the forces came from that made him, we must confess that they now exist and flourish in our midst. Czolgosz is the product of an unassimilated Europeanism of social injustice and partisan defamations. He is not the logical product of Americanism, but rather of continental Europe.

We cannot close our eyes to the social injustices which breed discontent among the people. Partisan defamations have killed our three martyrs. Lincoln was killed because of representations of him as a monster. Cartoons and misrepresentations caused a sentiment of which found its logical expression in Booth. Garfield was killed because Giltspur was made to believe that he was disloyal to his party. William McKinley was killed by the irresponsible agitators of loud mouthed men and women.

Words by Rev. W. A. Hall
The grand sentiment of "America" was raised feelingly by hundreds of voices after which the Rev. W. A. Hall spoke, finding the thought for his remarks in the faces of the old soldiers of the Grand Army and their draped flag. That flag means more today than ever before, not because it stands for seventy-five millions of people and the richest nation on earth but because of the trial through which it has passed. The black makes the colors of the flag brighter. The nation testified by its great assemblies and processions of the day, that it was more firmly united for liberty and stronger against lawlessness than ever before. Only through the blackness of death did we become a nation. All the fearful cost of bloody wars have made the nation what it is and the flag what it is. The veterans fought to see that the principles of the country are carried out.

Two thoughts are to be found in the great sorrow. President McKinley's faith was a simple, practical, working faith in a living God, such a faith as all men need to direct their everyday duties and make their lives unselfish, loving, thoughtful and sublime and the second thought is the certainty of death for all. The president's position high as it was, was lost to him in a moment by the bullets, but that less than a thimbleful of a man, Czolgosz, the slender thread of his life snapped as easily as that of the most lowly. The great lesson to be learned is that the human soul does not find its chief destiny here. We must do our work on earth, realizing that there is no abiding city, seeking one that is to come.

Rev. Barrington Followed
Rev. A. H. Barrington followed Rev. Hall, saying that while the world was shocked by the deed of the miserable assassin, it was electrified by the nobleness and grandeur of the dying of William McKinley. His death implies holy living. The two go together. In private life he was pure, in his relations with his fellow men he was honest, in his friendships he was loyal and in his family relations he was a typical man. Thirty years of married life, ending as they began, one continuous courtship.

The bridegroom was noted for his tender care of one who had become an invalid. It is no surprise that he electrified the world in dying. He met his death, whispering the words of the hymn we all love, "Nearer, My God to Thee," but as the words came from his lips, they were not a prayer, not a hymn but a declaration. He knew what was coming and because of his faith he realized that in truth he was nearer his God.

William McKinley is not dead. He whom he served in his life has called him up higher. God hath taken him to himself. While we are in sorrow, he is at peace, at rest with the saluts of light in the paradise of God.

Mr. Henderson's Remarks.
Rev. J. T. Henderson said that sometimes God decides to make men think by sending them some great calamity. The nation is in tears over such a calamity, sent in our boundless prosperity. As we bow our heads in silence and wash our eyes with tears perhaps we shall see things to which we have been blind.

Religion will receive a new impetus and a deeper meaning as we look to the year of 1901 and the three rulers who died. Each represented the purity of the home, the sanctity of the fireside. May their deaths baptize the country anew to the sanctity of home life. Possibly no representative of the Grand Army will again sit in the presidential chair but the principles for which they fought are so impressed on the nation that they will never be effaced. A just cause stirred them to valor. In the light of death we appreciate fully the fundamental principles of religion, the power of prayer.

Before announcing the closing hymn, Rev. Denison said that he wished to say a word to the young people. He wondered if they realized that in the great day just passed, the five minutes of silence when the wheels of commerce did not turn were memorial moments. It is a great crisis to which God has called us. We need true citizenship, loyalty and the patriotism. If we love the flag and the nation and hope to give a legacy of liberty to our children's children yet unborn, we must arise and stand for purity of principle and honor in the nation's politics. There is another lesson to learn. We should look up to God and try to live so that when the end comes we too may go home to be nearer our God.

The audience sang "Nearer My God to Thee" and then Rev. A. H. Barington pronounced the benediction. It was a great meeting, the audience having been almost breathless in the intense interest with which every word of the excellent address was listened to and joining soulfully in the singing of the hymns.

JANESVILLE HONORS ILLUSTRIOUS DEAD

departed president. It is very fitting that we should join in this observance and I reverentially suggest that we bow our heads and for two minutes commune with our hearts and with our God.

There is nothing so impressive as complete silence and there are few who will ever forget the hush which fell upon the magnificent audience. As citizens of a Christian nation, forgetting all differences in creed or belief, men, women and children sat with bowed heads during those few minutes when all America stood in silence and reverence. It being the time when the body of President McKinley was laid at rest in the beautiful cemetery at Canton.

Prayer By Rev. Mr. Hall.
The eloquence of that supreme tribute was brought to a close when Dr. Whiting raised his bowed head and proceeded with the program. In announcing the invocation, Dr. Whiting said that long ago Rousseau said in commenting on death that Socrates died like a philosopher; Jesus, the Christ died like a God. William McKinley died like a Christian and what is grander, he lived like a Christian. Such a life, and such a death must not be lost upon a nation or upon the families and individuals that make a nation. William McKinley believed in prayer. His faith was simple in its sublimity. Dr. Whiting then introduced Rev. W. A. Hall, pastor of the Court Street M. E. church.

Rev. Hall's prayer was one of the most beautiful appeals that ever voiced the cry of human hearts for divine help. The prayer was brief, but in its eloquence and earnestness all the great need of a stricken people was remembered. In his talk with the God whom he worshipped Rev. Hall said that as a nation we are bowed down with grief and as citizens of the nation we come to God, praying for help in the dark hour and trust in the divine providence. We return thanks for President McKinley's life, his elevated and pure living, his gentleness, his sympathy and his love; for his glorious death, his courage, his forgiving spirit manifested toward the assassin, his submission to God's will, his calmness in the hour of death and for the wonderful progress which has given us this republic. He prayed that the processions and assemblies in the president's honor might be a protest against the spirit of lawlessness and anarchy. After asking help for the bereaved widow, Rev. Hall concluded his prayer with "we pray that his God may be our God; his faith, our faith his unselfishness, our unselfishness. Grant that we may be a nation indeed as he was a president, whose Lord is our Lord."

Address by W. G. Wheeler
Dr. Whiting read the words of President McKinley's favorite hymn, "Lead, Kindly Light," which was then beautifully sung by the First M. E. church male quartet, including Dr. F. L. Richards, E. E. Van Pool, H. E. Cary and Archie Crawford.

In introducing Hon. W. G. Wheeler, United States District Attorney, Dr. Whiting said that he was impressed beyond the power of expression with the position which the young men occupy. The death of the president has brought them conspicuously to the front because upon them fall the responsibilities of the government. The time is already come. The president is a young man. The young men were ably represented by the next speaker, Hon. W. G. Wheeler.

Mr. Wheeler's address was stirring, forceful and eloquent and he was greeted with continued applause. His address should be read by every citizen of Janesville and it is published in full in another column.

Nearer My God to Thee.
The Court Street M. E. church quartet, including Miss Cora Anderson, Mrs. Fanny Clark, Frank Smith and Archie Crawford with Miss Ada Pond at the piano, then led the audience in singing, "Nearer, My God to Thee," the chorus being a magnificent one.

Dr. Whiting said that singing such a song put the people in sympathy with the advisers in spiritual affairs and he introduced Den E. M. McGinnity, pastor of the St. Patrick's church, as a prelate of distinction and a grand citizen who for a quarter of a century has upheld the standard of civilization in this city.

Address of Dean McGinnity
Dean McGinnity's address was an exceptionally able one and his sentiments were received with spontaneous and long continued applause. In his introduction he called attention to the fact that it was just twenty years ago yesterday that President Garfield succumbed to the bullet of the assassin. On September 19, 1881, President Garfield died. On Sept. 19, 1901 President McKinley was buried. President McKinley, struck down by the assassin's bullet, could still say "God's will be done." In the hour of death he manifested a Christian resignation which showed that his thoughts were heavenward. He showed his Christian character and proved himself a man of highly religious training. Just before his death he uttered the words "Nearer My God to Thee." Sublime aspirations and sublime language in a dying president and statesman.

These words at his death have elevated him more in the estimation of the people than if he had made all the conquests of an Alexander, the Great or a Napoleon Bonaparte. In the expression of Christian sentiment he not only consigned his case to God but showed forgiveness for the assassin. There is true Christian charity and love.

Some people blame him and the administration for strikes and trusts, but there are strikes and trusts in every country. More of them in Europe than in this land of freedom.

Our William McKinley, the Christian, the bold and intrepid soldier, governor of Ohio, member of the United States senate, president, the people have showered more honors and favors than on any other president who ever occupied the White House. He has built a niche for himself in the temple of fame. His name will live with the American people and his memory will sink into their hearts. May his example be followed by all of those who come after him.

Rev. Mr. Denison Speaks
Rev. Robert Denison, pastor of the Congregational church was the third and last speaker. As usual he gave a masterly and eloquent address, drawing lessons for the living from President McKinley's service to the nation as a Christian man. In introduction of his subject he said that it was no occasion for any estimate of Mr. McKinley's manhood and character to which the audience had already listened. The weighing of his name in history must be left to the future and rest assured the future will not forget him. The hearts of the people are too deeply stirred to form a just and true estimate. Every one has had grief of his own but this grief belongs to all, to this country and to other nations. All are made one world by one great sorrow and the wires have flashed with messages of sympathy from beyond the sea.

He Was a Patriot
We mourn our president because he was a patriot. He was one of that band of heroes whose ranks are ever growing thinner. With them he hurried himself into the nation's conflict and preserved its union. We do not need standing armies while we have the American boy. Given a just cause there never marched a better than these same American boys. He was not only a patriot in time of war but he had the greater patriotism of peace. He played the part of the true citizen. If a million dollar memorial be built for him in Washington it must be a useful one, some school or hall for the people. It would be no true memorial to him if it were not useful to the people he loved and served. His patriotism comes back to us in this crisis.

We know the poisonous reptile, anarchy, lies coiled at the heart of our civilization, ready to strike its poisonous fangs into our peace. The laws must be firmer, the traitor must be executed but it must be by law. We shall never cure the lawlessness of anarchy by the lawlessness of lynching. We must meet the crisis with calmness, strength, firmness, truth and good citizenship. It is not possible to meet it in passion. Anarchy is a plant, growing up out of the soil of ignorance. The soil must be removed.

After the singing of "America," the benedictory prayer, centering around the words, "Thy will be done," was eloquently offered by Rev. W. W. Woodside, pastor of the First M. E. church. The citizens' memorial service for William McKinley was over and the greatest audience fled out of the opera house in the silence that betokened a great sorrow.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured
by local application, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian tube. When the tube gets inflamed you have a running ear or imperfect hearing, and when it is cut off closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and the tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that can not be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

THE REMEDY.

It is well that we should bury our dead out of sight, and take up again the duties and responsibilities of active life. As the nation recovers from the first shock of the blighting calamity that appalled it, one of the first questions that demands attention, and that will engage public thought, is the question of anarchy and how to dispose of this dastardly curse, that deprived the nation of a president.

All sorts of schemes will be suggested. Impulsive, hot headed people will say, "banish the disciples of this foul creed to some uninhabited island and let them establish a government of their own." "Shoot them wherever found without trial." "Stamp them from the face of the earth as you would a venomous reptile." These and many other equally stringent measures will be suggested and none of them will be adopted, because impractical and visionary.

A stream is never purified except at the fountain, and anarchy will never be driven from American soil until teachings of anarchy, in whatever form, are suppressed.

This may not be done by law, because freedom of speech and expression of thought is one of the fundamental principles upon which the nation rests.

It is true that sedition and heresy as it comes from the brain and pen of Herr Most, and men of his class, may be governed to some extent by law, but it is just as true that this class of teachers are not the most dangerous, because public sentiment denounces them, and their influence is confined to a limited class.

America is cursed with a few hot headed, lawless citizens, who have found protection under the American flag, when they could no longer remain in the land that gave them birth. These people came to us because of disloyalty and they continue to rebel at all law.

But the nation is doubly cursed with a large class of respectable citizens who pose as reformers and who are not only filled with unrest, but who delight in spreading the seeds of discontent and disloyalty.

Many of these people are product of American soil, breathing the air of our free institutions and enjoying the benefit of the best government under the sun. Yet restless and unhappy, devoting every energy they possess in imparting the same spirit to others.

The disciples of this class, and it is dangerously large, are found in every calling and they are so near the surface that they are a constant menace to the welfare and safety of the government.

Labor organizations are threatened with them, men who believe it is a crime to own a dollar, and who do not hesitate to teach that capital should be regarded as an enemy and treated accordingly.

The colleges are not free from the same spirit of unrest, and professors and occasionally a president becomes notorious, for pernicious and disloyal doctrines advanced, while some of the text books used are so theoretical and impractical that they should be stamped as dangerous in the extreme. The press, be it said to its shame, is perhaps more responsible than any other influence, for the teaching of heresy. Public men are caricatured, capital is libeled, corporations maligned, and every energy seems bent on destruction. The yellow journal of whatever creed is the greatest menace to public safety and national welfare.

Who is responsible for these conditions, and what is the remedy? We, the people, and we alone must bear the responsibility. The nation will not be purged of the blighting curse until we awake from our lethargy, and in the strength of intelligent man and womanhood, say in one voice, "This curse must be wiped out and I will assume my share of personal responsibility."

The only effective remedy is in the court of public opinion, where all questions of morality and many questions of expediency are constantly being tried. This court, so intangible and yet so significant, is a court of the people and the measure of justice or of neglect is with the people.

When personal responsibility is fully realized, labor will no longer listen to the artful teachings of the agitator and the walking delegate and be deprived of an occupation.

The colleges will no longer teach doctrines that are pernicious, however lofty may be the aim, because the young minds that imbibed this kind of poison have been intelligently transferred to more wholesome surroundings.

The yellow journal will be a thing of the past, because no longer in demand and the brain and money that produced it will be devoted to channels of usefulness.

When these conditions prevail and may God speed the day, then, and not till then, will anarchy receive its death blow and cease to thrive on American soil.

DAMNED EITHER WAY.

"If you can't pull, push," seems to be the new motto of the non-protectionists. They have surely reversed their motor. They used to say we really could not ever build up an export trade unless we quit fooling with high duties and put our market wide open to all comers. They demonstrated this to a dot with some of the most beautiful theories that you ever saw. Lots of folks believed it without ever understanding it at all. The Democratic party—except Sam Randall—and a small remnant—fought no end of battles for the doctrine, whether it believed it or not, winding up with the Wilson-Gorman Tariff Act, that the boss Free-Trader of all said was a piece of "perfidy and dishonor."

"Well the Atlantic ocean has continued to roll in in spite of Mrs. Partridge and her broom. More and more the exports grow until this country is $600,000,000 per annum ahead of the game. Something had to be done or the next election would go by default. Looking over the ground the anti-protectionists—assisted a little, perhaps by Brother Babcock—have discovered that not only have we an export trade, but it is really growing too fast and will bankrupt the universe if we don't even up some how. And they are worrying about it, like the man who worried all the time because the sun was growing cold, while his wife took in washings. We are told now that we mustn't sell goods so fast and so cheap, that we ought to buy more or not sell so much.

"It's hard to please the non-Pros, but there is one thing they stick to and that is that they are much more concerned for the welfare of the folks across the water than of their neighbors right around home. They may not admit it, but that's the only way their theories ever work out. Their advice to us protectionists seems to be: "You'll be damned if you do and you'll be damned if you don't"—American Economist.

The American Economist, devoted to the protection of American labor and industries is a staunch advocate of reciprocity, as advocated by the late President McKinley in his last speech at Buffalo, but is strongly opposed to free trade, or any effort on the part of congress to reduce the tariff, except in the interests of reciprocal trade relations.

It will be noticed that the paper regards the attitude of Congressman Babcock with suspicion. The Gazette does not understand that Mr. Babcock is threatened with free trade, or that he should be classed with anti-protectionists. He represents a constituency that has always been sound on the tariff question, and he is too shrewd a politician to advocate measures that his state would not endorse.

Wisconsin was a great admirer of Blaine. She believed in the man, had confidence in his great statesmanship. He was the first great exponent of reciprocity and had been permitted to live his voice would have been heard and influence felt, in establishing international trade relations on a basis of fairness and equality.

The great mind never lost sight of the best interests of America and when the late President McKinley recommended a reciprocal policy, his judgment prompted him to adopt the same measure suggested by the illustrious statesman of former years.

The country had enough of free trade in four short years of recent experiment. It has prospered under a wise protective tariff beyond compare, but with our increased output it becomes necessary to cultivate the most friendly trade relations and a readjustment of the tariff to meet conditions in some cases may be advisable. This is not free trade, and is not in conflict with the doctrines of the republican party.

TITUS AND LEWIS ACCEPT.

Judge Titus and Judge Lewis prominent members of the bar association of Buffalo, have been assigned to the unpleasant duty of defending the assassin Czolgosz. The bar association of Buffalo are really his defenders as will be seen by the following telegram sent by President Moot to Judge Titus in Milwaukee:

"The Bar association, at the instance of those who have the right to ask that it be so, has unanimously agreed upon you and Judge Lewis to act as counsel for Leon Czolgosz. Judge Emery has appointed you. This was done that an insane man should not be convicted if he be insane, and that his trial should not be degraded into a mere attempt to cheat justice, if he be sane. If you will act, Judge Lewis will act, on the understanding that the entire Bar association shall give such advice and assistance from time to time as shall be required.

"Anarchy is to be denounced and the law upheld. But if the man is insane, in the words of Mr. McKinley, 'Let no man hurt him.' Please wire at once that you will act with Judge Lewis and state when you can be here for consultation. It is desired that he be arraigned today, that his rights be reserved, a plea of not guilty entered, and that his trial be proceeded with, next week.

"There has never been a better opportunity to render the law a real service than in seeing that there is a fair trial in this man's case. And if it is to be held, the people of the world will see what it means to have expert lawyers to defend with ability and dignity and justice. The bar urges you to discharge this disagreeable duty."

ADELBERT MOOT, President. The impassioned statement will be endorsed by all thinking people. The dignity of the law as well as the good name of the nation, should be maintained, and justice will result.

The tribute of silence paid to the dead president yesterday, was very impressive. The activities of life not only in this country, but across the sea, stood still, while the casket that contained all that was mortal of our beloved dead, was lowered to its final resting place.

The Oshkosh Northwestern proposes to consider the renomination of Senator Spooner later. This will hardly effect the outcome in the minds of the people.

Aguinaldo mourns as an American citizen. The transformation from a rebel to a sympathizer in one short year is very significant.

PRESS COMMENT.

Racine Journal: The people of Wisconsin want Senator Spooner returned to the senate. They take no part in the schemes of a few men to prevent it. The popular demand goes.

Appleton Post: While the Post is not in favor of capital punishment as a general proposition, it is shedding no tears because Czolgosz is certain to be put to death in the electric chair—that being the punishment in New York.

Council Bluffs Nonpareil: A Wisconsin man who had spoken disrespectfully of the dead president was compelled to kneel down and kiss the flag and McKinley's picture. This seems as though the punishment was inflicted on the flag and the picture instead of on the man, to be thus touched by lips so profane.

Galesburg Evening Mail: The republican party forced the vice-presidency upon Theodore Roosevelt against his will, and now the presidency has come to him in a way which he profoundly regrets. For the new president the past year has been filled with mutations and anathemas. The most sincere mourner for President McKinley is the man who has succeeded him. Col. Roosevelt is a unique figure in American politics.

Oshkosh Northwestern. It certainly gives rise to pleasant thoughts in the breasts of all Americans to be told that even Spain, our recent enemy, the newspapers speak with great respect of the late President McKinley. Spain has had her share of trouble with other nations within the memory of the present generation. It is to be hoped that Emma Goldman, Herr Most and the other anarchists whose teachings have inspired Czolgosz may be closely enough connected with the crime so that adequate punishment may be inflicted upon them. The whole crowd of anarchists cannot be too soon exterminated.

Marquette Eagle: It is a source of satisfaction to the people to know that there will be no delay in the punishment of the anarchist that assassinated the president. He has already been indicted by the grand jury and his trial will come off before another fortnight rolls around. It is too bad that some more severe punishment than that of electrocution cannot be given under the laws of New York. It is to be hoped that Emma Goldman, Herr Most and the other anarchists whose teachings have inspired Czolgosz may be closely enough connected with the crime so that adequate punishment may be inflicted upon them. The whole crowd of anarchists cannot be too soon exterminated.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas King went to Chicago yesterday returning last night at midnight. They accompanied their grand-daughter, Miss Flora McLean, who has been visiting in this city and who is to enter Kemper hall for the coming year.

Because yesterday was a day of universal mourning and grief, the Backman Comedy company gave no performance last evening. Tonight the doors of the theater will be opened again, and a first class production of "The Man of Mystery" will be given. As suggested by the title, this is a strong play with a splendid and thrilling plot, and full of exciting situations. Tomorrow afternoon at the matinee Maggie Mitchell's beautiful play will be presented, and the prices of admission will be ten cents for children and twenty cents for adults. Tomorrow night the company will close its engagement, and three prizes of $5 each will be given to the holders of the lucky numbers:

Rush Work on City Hall. Contractor Rawson & Son are rushing the work on the new city hall. Already over two-thirds of the foundation has been laid and quite an amount of brick wall built. The cut stone corner pieces in the Wall street entrance are in place. The rainy weather has delayed the work considerably. As soon as the foundation is all in place rapid work will be done in the laying of the brick walls. A force of stone cutters are at work under the covered shed at the east side of the lot getting the cut stone for the trimmings ready. The contractors expect to have the building all closed in before the cold weather sets in.

A telephone message to Gov. La Follette at Madison concerning the story printed in this morning's Record about the record breaking run of a special train bearing Dr. Senn of Chicago to Madison to see the governor, reveals the fact that he entire story was the product of some one's vivid imagination. There was no foundation for the story and it was the opinion of the governor's friends that some one had been "stringing" the newspaper man who printed it.

Mr. and Mrs. D. Whaley are entertaining Mr. and Mrs. John B. Jenkins of Milwaukee.

BURGLARS ENTER 3 RESIDENCES

THREE JANESVILLE HOMES ENTERED DURING THE PARADE.

Houses of John Gleason, A. C. Munger and Frederick Rau, Despoiled by Thieves, Who Have Not Yet Been Apprehended—Jimmy Used on the Furniture.

Burglars took advantage of the fact that almost everyone was away from home yesterday afternoon, watching the parade to ransack two Third ward homes. At the home of John Gleason, 251 South Bluff street, they gained entrance to the house by way of the front door. The key was left on the window sill near the door and the screen door turned back against the window. The thieves evidently intended to force the window and discovered the key to the door which saved them the trouble of breaking in.

Once inside of the house they took their time to ransack everything. When they found a drawer locked they forced it open with a jimmy. The damage to the furniture amounted to more than anything else. After making a thorough search and not finding any money or jewelry they took Mr. Gleason's overcoat which hung on the rack in the hall and left an old one in its place. They then left the house the same way that they entered. Chief Hogan took the overcoat they left behind to see if he could discover any clue as to its ownership that would lead to the arrest of the thieves.

Mr. Gleason states that he and his wife left the house at 1:30 o'clock and were not gone much over an hour. The thieves evidently went from Gleason's to A. C. Munger's residence on Clark street. Here they gained entrance to the house by using a jimmy on a window opening on the front porch. The catch was broken by the use of the instrument, giving them an easy entrance to the house. Here as at Gleason's they ransacked everything in the house.

The jimmy was used on everything that was locked. Drawers and trunks were broken open and damaged. Furniture was overturned and broken and the bedding pulled off of the bedsteads in their search for plunder.

In Miss Mabel Munger's room they even went so far as to tear up the carpet around the edge of the room. The damage done by them amounted to almost as much as the property taken. Their search resulted in their finding a gold watch worth $40, belonging to Miss Mabel, a watch worth $25, belonging to A. C. Munger; $15 belonging to his son and quite an amount of silverware.

Mr. Munger and his family were down watching the parade, and were not gone much over an hour. Everything was all right when they left home but looked like a cyclone when they returned. They immediately telephoned for the police for the police and Chief Hogan, Officer Brown and Sheriff Maltress were soon on the grounds.

No one seemed to be able to give any clue to the thieves as no one happened to see them enter or leave either Munger's or Gleason's. Two men were seen by the family at Mr. Billock's place on South Main street to come from the direction of Mr. Munger's home and run through their yard towards the river. Here all track of them was lost. The police are now busy looking for traces of the robbers.

It was evidently the same men who went through the houses of John Gleason and A. C. Munger, that made the raid on Frederick Rau's home on North Jackson street last evening. Their manner of entrance and the way things were handled in the house are similar to the work done in other places.

Mr. Rau, his wife and family came down town last night, shortly after six o'clock and were gone about an hour. When they returned home they noticed that the upper part of the home was lighted and thought it singular, as the lights had been turned out before they started down town.

When they opened the front door they saw from the appearance of the rooms that some one had been in the house. They concluded that the marauders were still up stairs and Mrs. Rau went to F. S. Baines' residence next door to call for an officer. There was some delay in getting the police and in the meantime the neighborhood had been alarmed. They turned out with all kinds of weapons to keep the men inside until the police arrived. When they came a search of the premises was made but the birds had flown.

They entered the house by the way of a window opening on the rear porch, which had been forced open with a jimmy, the marks of the instrument being visible on the window sill and casing. The lower floor had not been much disturbed, but the upper floor presented a scene of disorder. Tables had been overturned and drawers ransacked and given a thorough search. The thieves carried off two gold watches, a diamond initial ring and about $12 in pennies belonging to the children. The whole lot was worth about $150.

Mrs. Rau thought she heard someone when she opened the front door, and it must have been the men escaping by the back door.

It has since developed that several parties saw the men during the afternoon but cannot give a clear description of them. They called at W. H. Witham's house on South Main street yesterday afternoon and rapped on the door. Mr. Witham was sick and not being able to go to the door rapped on the window to attract their attention. One of them came up to the window and asked if a plumber by the name of Wilson lived there. On being told he did not they left. The men are described as being of medium height, dressed in dark clothes. The police have several clues they are working on and hope to get the men.

Eight beds were torn apart and 82 drawers opened by the burglars at A. C. Munger's yesterday.

FINE CATTLE AT THE BUFFALO SHOW

Gazette Representative Makes a Trip to the Stock Department of the Exposition.

Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 17—(Special)—At the Buffalo fair during this month can be seen some of the finest cattle in the world. Aristocratic cattle whose lineage can be traced for many generations, have been assembled here for the cattle show which is a big and interesting feature.

We were told that there were over 1,500 entries and includes stock from the most famous farms of the United States, and Canada; both beef and dairy breeds are shown and each represented by an association.

Some famous cows of the dairy breed are exhibited and in fact the keenest competition is centered in this class, confined mostly to Jerseys. There were two judges in this class and the two were unable to make a decision so that a third one will be called in today.

Among the famous cows competing are C. A. Sweets two great cows Frides Olga Fourth with a record of sixty-five pounds and twelve ounces of milk per day and Gertie with a record of 17,000 pounds of milk a year. Surprise, owned by H. N. Higginbotham, president of the World's Fair; Lellan's Ada, owned by Wm. Rockefeller; Golden Rose Bay, purchased at auction by George C. Vanderbilt for his farm at Billmore, paying the small sum of $3,750.

On Friday a parade of the winning cattle will be held in the stadium which will be something similar to that of the Fat Stock Show held at Chicago.

Buffalo feels peculiarly hard hit by the great crime committed here because of the effect of the exposition. This enterprise means so much to the Buffalonians that whatever affects it unfavorably is regarded as a general business misfortune. This phase of the tragedy which plunged the country into mourning is local to the city. The place where I stop had nine roomers before the assassination and now there are only two and the landlady states that this is the same cry throughout the city by all those having rooms to rent.

H. S. NUGENT.

HONOR MISS SUSIE LOWELL

Appointed General Secretary of the Y. W. C. A. of the State University. Miss Susie Lowell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Lowell, has been honored by being appointed general secretary of the Young Women's Christian Association at the University of Wisconsin. She leaves for Madison tonight. Her year's work requires her to be at Madison until Thanksgiving after which she will remain at home until the busy season begins again in February.

Miss Lowell is specially fitted for the work of the association. A brilliant student she was graduated from the Janesville High school in 1896 and from the University of Wisconsin in 1900. She won some of the highest honors during her four years at the university and at her graduation was made a member of the honorary fraternity, membership in which depends on scholarship. Last year she devoted her time to teaching in the Waupun high school. She has always had a deep interest in the Y. W. C. A. and has attended many of the summer conventions at Geneva lake.

Her work at Madison will be entirely with the young women of the university. Her wide acquaintance with the students of the university will make her new work pleasant for her and she is sure of a warm welcome from former friends. Her graceful, tactful manner, high character and her popularity should make her very successful in this work for young women.

Returned Home From New York. Mrs. J. T. Wright and Miss Helen Hunt have returned home from an extended visit in their native state, New York. J. T. Wright went to Chicago to meet him and he and the ladies saw the great memorial parade yesterday. The crowds on the streets were immense and children found ready purchasers of small wooden boxes at fifty cents and one dollar each. People in the rear of the crowd bought them so they could see over the heads of those in front of them. Mr. and Mrs. Wright and Miss Hunt were in Thompson's restaurant when 2:30 o'clock, the time of silence came. Every waiter took his station at his own table and stood like a statue and unbroken silence reigned in the room as well as all over the city. It was an impressive scene, never to be forgotten. Whistles, bells, machinery and cars were still and Chicago for five minutes was as still as death.

By its agreement with the council the company agrees to put in four tracks across the street which they are to grade and macadamize, outside the tracks and to plank inside.

FIRE IN A BARN QUICKLY SUBDUED

About two o'clock yesterday afternoon just as the parade had started fire was discovered in a barn belonging to McKelgue and Worthington, by the boys employed in The Gazette press room. The fire had gained considerable headway when discovered, and looked as if the barn was liable to be consumed. The number of old wooden buildings in the vicinity made it a bad place for a fire and when informed where the fire was turned in an alarm from box 28. The department had just started in the parade but turned out and made a quick run to the scene of the fire, which was about subdued by the boys from The Gazette office. Ten dollars will cover the damage. The origin of the fire is not known, but is supposed to have been started by some drunk.

FEAR FOR MRS. MCKINLEY

The Widow Said to Be Near Collapse.

UNABLE TO ATTEND FUNERAL.

Doctor's Assurance as to Her Health Is Disproved by Events—Mrs. Hobart Stays in Canton to Minister to Her Friend.

Canton, O., Sept. 20.—Mrs. McKinley, contrary to the predictions of Dr. Rixey, her family physician, was unable to attend the funeral services for her late husband at the First Methodist church or to endure the long drive to Westlawn cemetery. Little information has been given out by members of the family regarding Mrs. McKinley since the death of the President. From the outset the report has been that the grief-stricken woman has been hearing her great ordeal with fortitude since Friday and that her physical condition was as favorable as could be expected under the circumstances. Collateral reports have been received, however, to the effect that Mrs. McKinley's mind is failing, that she has acted as one entirely oblivious of surroundings and that much of the time since the death of President McKinley she has labored under the delusion that he still is alive. The truth is left to conjecture.

Scout Dr. Rixey's Assurance.
Dr. Rixey said in advance that Mrs. McKinley was bearing up well and that with twenty-four hours' rest and seclusion would be able to attend the funeral. However, she was not permitted to leave her home in the afternoon and several persons intimate with the family said the idea that Mrs. McKinley should leave her room was preposterous in view of her critical condition. The facts are secret with Dr. Rixey. The best information available, and it is not direct, is that Mrs. McKinley is on the verge of collapse and is under heavy opiates. The prediction is general that she will not long survive her husband and that even temporary recovery will leave her mind a wreck.

Say She Wept by the Bier.
The reports issuing from the house early in the afternoon were that Mrs. McKinley was sitting in the parlor of her home with the casket of the dead president. The story is that she wept hysterically when the guard came to remove the body and that she remained at the bier until the last moment. At the cemetery Dr. Rixey declared he had repeatedly said during the last week: "Mrs. McKinley is doing as well as can be expected." The report that President Roosevelt has decided upon the appointment of Dr. Rixey as surgeon-general of the navy is confirmed, but it seems hardly probable that this information should be communicated at this time to Mrs. McKinley, according to the official statement. On the whole, there seems to be a great deal of mystery over Mrs. McKinley's condition which her friends here are unable to fathom. When Mrs. McKinley reached Canton she was almost carried to her carriage by Abner McKinley and Dr. Rixey. That is the last that has been seen of her.

Will Never Go to Washington.
Mrs. McKinley, however, will never return to Washington, according to her friends. She will make her home in Canton. Dr. Rixey and his wife will remain with Mrs. McKinley for an indefinite period. It was said at the McKinley house at 10 o'clock p. m. that Mrs. McKinley was sleeping. Her failure to attend the services at the church and ceremonies at the cemetery inspired the report that she was dying. The reason she did not go to church was that Dr. Rixey thought it best for her to remain at home. She at first insisted on going, but finally was persuaded to remain with Mrs. Hobart, the widow of the vice-president, to whom she is greatly attached.

Dr. Manchester's Address.
Rev. Dr. C. E. Manchester, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal church of Canton, which President McKinley attended when he lived there, spoke briefly at the funeral in Canton on the life of the man all mourned, saying in part:

"Our President is dead. The silver cord is loosed, the golden bowl is broken, the pitcher is broken at the fountain, the wheel broken at the clemens, the mourners go about the streets. One voice is heard, a wail of sorrow from all the land, for the beauty of Israel is slain upon the high places. How are the mighty fallen. I am distressed for thee, my brother. Very pleasant hast thou been unto me. Our President is dead. We can hardly believe it. We had hoped and prayed and it seemed that our hopes were to be realized and our prayers answered when the emotion of joy was changed to one of grave apprehension. Still we waited, for we said, 'It may be that God will be gracious and merciful unto us.' It seemed to us that it must be His will to spare the life of one so well beloved and so much needed. It was not at him that the fatal shot was fired, but at the very life of the government. His offering was vicarious. It was blood poured upon the altar of human liberty. In view of these things we are not surprised to hear from one who was present when this great soul passed away that he never before saw a death so peaceful, or a dying man so crowned with grandeur."

Centries at McKinley's Resting Place.
The last of the procession passed the bier at Canton at 5:45 o'clock, and then orders were given by Captain

Riddle that the cemetery be cleared. This was quickly carried out and the president was left in the care of his guard of honor. The first sentry to be posted in a tour of guard duty before the doorway was Private Otto White of Company C, Fourteenth Infantry, whose home is in Genoa, O. The vault gates closed with a hollow clang as the soldiers took up the weary round of sentry duty in the lonely cemetery. Two miles away, in the cottage so lately the home of a president, a heart-broken widow wrestled with her grief. And the funeral of William McKinley was over.

ROOSEVELT'S GRIEF.
Correspondence of Pressing Importance Is Set Aside.

Canton, O., Sept. 20.—President Roosevelt had a day devoted entirely to sorrow. Not for a moment did he give his time to business. Even correspondence of pressing importance forwarded from Washington waited. It was taken up today, when affairs of the nation began to progress in much the same manner as they would had the bullet of Czolgoz never been fired. President Roosevelt left the Harter residence in a closed carriage at 1 o'clock in the afternoon. With him was Capt. Cowles, U. S. N., his brother-in-law. He was escorted to the McKinley home by Troop A of Cleveland, formed in fours. After the funeral the President was escorted by the same troop back to the Harter residence, where he remained until he took the train back to Washington at night. He shows plain evidence of the strain that has been placed upon him during the last week. Deep lines are drawn in his face and his stalwart shoulders stoop a trifle forward. To one who said to the President in the afternoon that he was not looking well the reply was given: "I am well, but tired, very tired. Sleep is all the restorative that I need."

PRANK FOR MCKINLEY.
Memorial Address by William J. Bryan Delivered at Lincoln.

Lincoln, Neb., Sept. 20.—Memorial exercises for the dead President were held at the Auditorium and were largely attended. W. J. Bryan was one of the principal speakers. He said in part: "As monuments reared by grateful hands to the memory of heroes testify to the virtues of the living as well as to the services of the dead, so the sorrow that has overwhelmed our nation, obliterating the distinctions of party, race and religion, is as complimentary to the patriotism of our people as to our departed chief magistrate. It would indeed be a disgrace to our nation if the murder of a President concerned only the members of the dominant party. While no recent campaigns have aroused deeper feeling than those through which Mr. McKinley passed, yet in no contests did the minority more cheerfully acquiesce in the will of the majority as expressed at the polls. He was the President of all the people, and their dignity and sovereignty were attacked when he was assassinated." Mr. Bryan said he yielded to none in his appreciation of the private character and public virtues of McKinley, and paid him tribute in the following words: "I rejoice that his career so fully demonstrated the possibilities of American citizenship. The young men of the country can find inspiration and encouragement in the fact that he made his own way from obscurity to fame; those who are nearing the boundary of life can find consolation and example in the superb manner in which he fought his final battle, his courage and fortitude in the closing hours recalling the bravery which he showed as a soldier. Domestic happiness has never been better illustrated than in his life, and Christian faith and trust never better exemplified than in his death."

Priest Scores Socialism.
Phoenix, Ariz., Sept. 20.—In an address delivered to a large audience as a tribute to the late President McKinley, Father Novatus of the Catholic church here evoked in an arraignment of socialism and classified it with anarchy. He said that the prelates of the church had warned the administration shortly before the assassination of McKinley to adopt measures for the speedy destruction of anarchy in this country. Father Novatus declared that the church here has received orders to aid in crushing anarchy and he intimated that the policy comprehends the uprooting of socialism as necessary to the demolition of anarchy.

MOB HOOITS MARY WALKER.
Exponent of Women's Rights Escapes Lynching at Syracuse.
Syracuse, N. Y., Sept. 20.—Dr. Mary Walker, the betrousered exponent of women's rights, was nearly mobbed at the railway station in Oswego for speaking disrespectfully of the dead President. She was dressed in male attire, as usual, and a workman who overheard her, started to seize her by the throat. Then he recognized her and exclaimed: "You ought to be lynched." Workmen outside the building, hearing of Dr. Walker's remarks, crowded about her hooting and threatening her. "Lynch her!" cried one. "Yes, let's string her up," added another. The doctor, by this time, was in a state of abject terror. But the threats were not carried out, owing to the intervention of cooler persons. The doctor was finally allowed to purchase a ticket and board her train without being molested.

Scores Hurt at Chicago.
Chicago, Sept. 20.—Grief that blinded people's eyes and made hearts grow faint was responsible for an unprecedented number of injuries along the route of the solemn pageant in honor of McKinley. The health department made an effort to keep track of the casualties, but the officials admitted that their roster did not contain the names of half the persons relieved. A conservative estimate of those who met with accident places the total at 125.

Capital Bows in Prayer.
Washington, D. C., Sept. 20.—To the people of Washington the late President McKinley was more than an official; he was their kindly guardian, and they rendered their tributes of respect with whole hearts. The people, in accordance with President Roosevelt's proclamation, repaired to their churches to attend the memorial services and rarely have the places of worship been so crowded. All denominations, Protestant, Catholic and Jew, united in these.

Killing Frost Visits West.
Kansas City, Mo., Sept. 20.—There was killing frost in Western Missouri and Eastern Kansas last night, an earlier date for the first frost than for many years. Vegetables planted after the breaking of the drought in the hope of raising a crop before frost came were damaged. There was frost again to-night.

Over 6,000 Die of Plague.
London, Sept. 20.—A dispatch from Simla to the Times says the plague returns for last week show 6,386 deaths, against 4,822 in the preceding week and 1,136 in the corresponding week last year. Most of the deaths were in Bombay presidency.

"A Bright Little Boy"

Would be sure of a welcome in almost any home. But what a welcome the hope of children had been extinguished. What a welcome this particular "bright little boy" did have in such a home, may be judged by the closing paragraph of his mother's letter, given below. There is no room for the whole letter, which recounts a story of fifteen years of suffering and a perfect cure by the use of "three bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, two bottles of 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and some of the 'Pellets.'"

In many instances childlessness is the result of conditions which are curable. It has often happened that when "Favorite Prescription" has cured a woman of female weakness and the nervous condition attending it, her return to health is signalled by the birth of her first child. "Favorite Prescription" makes weak women strong, sick women well.

"I cannot tell half that Dr. Pierce's medicine has done for me," writes Mrs. T. A. Ragan, of Morris, Watonga Co., N. C. "It will do all that is claimed for it—prevent miscarriage and render childbirth easy. It has given me a bright little boy, and I would not have had him had it not been for your wonderful medicine. I cannot say too much in praise of it; I think it is worth its weight in gold. I thank God for my life, and Dr. Pierce for my health."

"Pleasant Pellets" clear the complexion.

GLOWING TRIBUTE TO M'KINLEY; BY THE HON. WM. G. WHEELER

Address Delivered at the Opera House Yesterday Afternoon During the Memorial Exercises Over the Death of the Chief Executive of Nation.

Mr. Chairman, Fellow Citizens, Friends and Neighbors: It is an occasion of inexpressible sadness that brings us together this Autumn afternoon and that has caused like gatherings in every city and hamlet in this great Republic. An occasion that brings home to the breast of each and every one of us a feeling of great and personal loss, that causes us to realize in the full measure of the term that a friend has been removed from us by a sudden and unexpected death.

Like a bolt of lightning from a clear sky and with the crushing weight of an avalanche came the news from Buffalo of the assassination of the president of the United States who but a few hours before had spoken to the country, and I may say the world, for it excited world-wide attention, in words expressing the great care and solicitude he always manifested, and who at the very moment of the tragedy, was meeting the people in friendly intercourse and extending to them the hand of friendship. While his arm was outstretched and his hand ready to take in friendly grasp, that of his assassin was striking down the prime of manhood, in the fulness of his career, in the active and faithful discharge of his duties as a servant of the people.

The report seemed entirely incredible. The people found it almost impossible to believe in this enlightened day, in this land of freedom and liberty, toward him of all men the hand of violence should be put forth.

When at last the truth was realized, a mighty and helpless and futile protest against the awful crime arose from the entire world.

For days the news from his sick bed was awaited with breathless interest. For days were breathed our fervent hope and prayers that he might recover to us in health. But it could not be. The cruel hand of violence had done its work too well. While in the strength of manhood and ennobled with the world. While he was happy in the society of his wife. While he enjoyed the confidence and esteem of the people. While in possession of the greatest confidence of that confidence he was suddenly called upon to bid farewell to friends, party, and country, to take leave of life with its ambitions, its pleasures, its responsibilities. To take a final parting from the wife of his bosom whose comfort and care had been his constant solace, and to leave her henceforth to tread her dreary path alone. And even in that last farewell he asked her to stand by him, and to have him alone, and with the words of the favorite hymn upon his lips he passed to his last reward.

And today in this place that has witnessed the debates of one of the other of the great political parties, we are gathered in all parts of the nation, we are here together not as partisans, but as citizens, nor with joy, but with sorrow, and in tears to pay the best tribute of respect to a loved and loving husband; to a faithful, able and conscientious servant of the people; to a noble Christian gentleman.

time of his youth until the day of his death his whole course toward those with whom he came in contact was such as to compel almost universal friendship, confidence and esteem. So deep a hold did we have upon the affections of the people of his own state that upon one occasion when he was chairman of a state convention of his party called to elect delegates to a national convention, his name was proposed as a delegate. He declined on the ground that four other names were already before the convention. A delegate put the motion and he was unanimously elected. He refused, to recognize the platform and again took the motion with the same result. He again refused to recognize the vote and the roll was called upon election of delegates with the result that he was again unanimously elected.

Upon another occasion in a national convention at the time of President Harrison's second nomination, although he positively refused to allow his name to be named in connection with the presidency, he received the votes of one hundred and forty-three delegates to that convention, and when at least four years later he became an avowed candidate for the place there was scarcely a dissenting voice, but with one accord the party tendered him the honor.

No, had the taking of his life been deferred until inspired by personal hatred he would today be in the full enjoyment of the love and affection of his family and the people.

He was made a victim because he was a representative of law and order of government, of society. Because he had sworn to protect the constitution of the United States and to enforce its laws, and because he was faithfully performing his duties according to his oath.

He had accepted the duties and responsibilities of his high office and discharged them with courage, ability, fidelity and honesty. And the trials and burdens of a foreign war, weighed down by the news and perplexing questions which arose as a consequence of that war, never once did he falter or hesitate. Surrounded though he was with able and experienced counselors his was the master mind that ruled upon and determined national policies.

And by his dignity and ability he commanded until the day of his death the respect and confidence of the entire American people.

A man of such eminent fairness that even upon his death bed he spoke a parting word to the miserable wretch who took his life.

In his youth when but a boy of eighteen he had offered himself and his life in the service of his country and for the thick of many battles and by his gallant conduct had raised himself from the position of a private to the rank of a major. His life was spared to him only to be devoted to the service of his country, a life that was wholly a sacrifice to his country. Sacrificed at the behest of an organization dominated not by reason but by prejudice, whose actions are prompted by regard for law and for government, but through hatred of it and of society. An organization which looks upon assassination as a cardinal virtue, upon any government as tyrannical, upon the acquisition of individual property as a crime. An organization that has for its ultimate object the abolition of society, law and government and the substitution of anarchy in their place.

In the direction of their teaching was expected a great disappointment must have been felt for notwithstanding the awful suddenness of the calamity, and regardless of how unprepared the country was for its happening, the machinery of government moved along without the slightest disturbance and the power and authority of the office was transferred instantly to our present chief executive. Indeed so far from shaking confidence in the ability of government it has increased public confidence in him and abroad in the permanence of our institutions.

The class of sensational newspapers known as "yellow" has been a factor in breeding the disregard for and contempt of laws shown by these organizations of anarchists. That newspapers of this class exert an influence that is detrimental to society is beyond question. That their articles furnish encouragement to those who are bent upon the commission of crime is also beyond question. They are a few days ago one of the number was questioned regarding her feelings toward the president, and she was asked to make the main portion of an editorial which had a few weeks ago in the columns of one of our most popular journals of this class, and which for brutality, and needlessly has rarely been equaled.

We have known of these anarchistic organizations and in a general way have known of their doctrines but we have hesitated to interfere with the promulgation of these doctrines by legislation or otherwise because we have been of the opinion that it was one of our most cherished rights.

Liberty of individual action, however, is confined to mean that freedom of action which each man has in so far as it is inconsistent with the rights of others and of society. And when individuals or societies advocate doctrines which lead up to such tragedies as that which calls us here today, it is the duty of the government to intervene and prohibit by law the declaration or publication of such seditious doctrines.

Already in our own states and in other states and among members of congress legislation is proposed looking to the suppression of this detestable class. It may be that we can accomplish this unadvised and may be that co-operation of other countries may be necessary. It would seem however, that if people are to be allowed to call at society and government by force that they should be content with the rule of organized society without the rule of organized society.

It may be that we have too deeply moved by our emotions at the present time to suggest or devise a practical measure to suppress this class. It is a fact that out of all the deep and sincere feeling, when the poignancy of the nation's grief has passed that a comprehensive measure will be suggested, and in its operation it will be impossible for persons of that class to live in our midst as long as they persist in holding to their detestable and crime-inciting doctrines.

If this assassination of President McKinley shall have the ultimate effect of making it impossible for such doctrines to flourish he would not have died in vain. In fact, it will be impossible for persons of that class to live in our midst as long as they persist in holding to their detestable and crime-inciting doctrines.

And now in bidding farewell to the illustrious dead we may say of him as said of Washington, "His name was of power to rally a nation, in the hour of thick threatening public disasters and calamities, that name alone could still the storm, a beacon light to cheer and give the country's friends; it flamed like a meteor to repel her foes. That name, in the days of peace, was a lodestone, attracting to itself a whole people's confidence, a whole people's love, and the whole world's respect. "That name descending with all time spreading over the whole earth, and uttered in all the languages belonging to the tribes and races of men, will forever be pronounced with affectionate gratitude by everyone in whose breath there shall arise an aspiration for human rights and human liberty."

Place of Wood in His Eye

About two weeks ago a young son of David Brown while playing fell and ran a stick that he was carrying into his eye injuring it badly. He was taken to Dr. Thorne's office and the eye dressed. Contrary to expectations the eye grew worse instead of better and was terribly swollen and inflamed. Yesterday another examination of the injured member was made and a piece of wood almost an inch long and a quarter of an inch wide was taken from under the eyeball. It looked like a piece of wood from a strawberry box.

The meeting being held in Illinois there will be pool selling on the races. A. A. Swearingen, of Chicago, well-known to race followers in this city will have the pool privileges. Preparations to take care of a large crowd are being made by the managers.
